Just a couple of words about bananas

Booming the trend of healthy food is a new reality!

---

Bananas are grown in more than 150 countries, producing 105 million tonnes of fruit per year. The bananas grown for local consumption are generally grown in traditional, extensive systems. Dessert bananas account for 43 million tonnes per year and are of huge economic importance for many countries in the South. Cooking bananas (plantains and others) account for 45 million tonnes. Locally consumed bananas, which are a staple food in many tropical countries, play a major role in terms of food security.

“Super Food” Category

Caribbean bananas are generally grown on small family owned farms using more sustainable methods of production than those used on the large monoculture plantations in Latin America. This does however exclude some of the larger Caribbean countries such as Ecuador where bananas are also produced on medium-scale plantations.
